INSTITUTES
OF
INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Summer, 1937

Purpose

THESE INSTITUTES provide an intensive survey of the crucial aspects of international relations today and probe into the underlying causes behind dominant world trends. They seek to evaluate the major issues in our own foreign policy and to review the various legislative questions which affect our relations to other countries.

These programs also discuss ways and means by which those attending can use this information in developing effective types of community education in world affairs in clubs, churches, and schools. Taking up as they do, not only the political, economic, and psychological aspects of war and peace, but the educational and spiritual phases as well, they inspire a dedication to the struggle for an improved international order.

Japanese Student Relocation

ANY WAR situation brings hardship into the lives of many people, the innocent and unoffending being involved in the general disruption, along with those responsible for the social catastrophe. A major obligation therefore rests upon each one of us to render the greatest possible service to all the direct or indirect victims of war in any of its aspects.

This touches us very closely as we look at our own Pacific Coast, where the mass evacuation of all people of Japanese ancestry, as a war emergency measure, meant the removal from their homes and occupations of more than one hundred thousand persons. They are now being transferred to a number of relocation colonies, where, under the War Relocation Authority, steps are being taken to institute as quickly as possible, an approximation of normal life. Agricultural and industrial projects are getting under way, along with basic educational and recreational activities.

Among the evacuees are approximately twenty-five hundred American-born Japanese students, who were enrolled in colleges and universities, or were just finishing high school and intending to go on to college. These young people are not "aliens," but Americans by birthright, brought up in our American schools, eager to demonstrate their loyalty to American ideals, and go on with their education in preparation for useful service and still fuller assimilation into our national life. The Government recognizes the particular problem facing this group, and is endeavoring to work out a plan which will make it possible for many of them to transfer and re-enroll in comparable institutions outside the proscribed areas.

At the time of the evacuation, the administrative officers of the colleges where these students were enrolled, national student organizations, church bodies, and many other

SOME APPROACHES TO PEACE BY THE A

ONE-DAY PEACE CONFERENCES

Approximately 600 were held in the past year.

- The Conferences provide peace education for local communities.
- Local committees co-sponsor programs and make all local arrangements.
- The educational value is cumulative as Conferences are repeated annually or semi-annually in the same places.
- These Conferences serve many people who could not attend distant Conferences.
- The One-Day Conferences reach more people than any other A.F.S.C. program.

"Since the great aim is a world community, the great task is education. . . . We must expand it and intensify it, until education in understanding becomes the major occupation of all our youth and the major activity of all adults, in their steadily increasing leisure time. Every school, college, and university, every library, community building, and hall must become a center of the education of Americans of all ages in that common tradition and those common ideas and ideals upon which a world community must rest."
